

Get the Most Out of TSMC 2021

Before the Event

- Make sure you have a good internet connection with enough bandwidth. Try to limit devices connected to the internet to avoid taking up too much bandwidth.
- If you can, download Zoom ahead of time to make joining go smoother. You can also join from your browser if you are unable to download Zoom, but some functionality may be limited.
- Test your audio and, if planning on joining the networking sessions, test your microphone and video too. Pro tip: try using a headset if you have one as it captures better audio than your computer's built-in microphone.
- Join the conversation on social media to connect with other attendees. Join the Facebook or LinkedIn groups or use the event hashtag #TSMC2021. Post about sessions you're looking forward to and interact with others who are posting.
 - Twitter: Use hashtag #TSMC2021
 - Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/tsmc2021>
 - LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/groups/8981103/>
- Explore the TSMC2021 agenda to find when sessions are happening and how to join. All abstracts are also listed if you want to read more about a particular talk.

During the event

- Join sessions early to make sure you have time to fix any last-minute technical issues. While you're there, start chatting with other attendees and presenters!
- If you experience issues you can't resolve, please reach out to the UES Support team for assistance. Contact Tibby Starks at tstarks@ues.com or Lorrie Strausbaugh at lstrausbaugh@ues.com.
- Interact with other attendees using the chat features, and don't forget that social media is a great way to continue the conversation.
- Use the Q&A features (not chat) to ask presenters questions during the live Q&As.

After the event

- Please take our post-event survey to tell us about your experience! We can use this information to improve the TSMC event in the future, as well as other events we pivot to make virtual or hybrid.
- Continue the conversation on social media! Find other people talking about the event by searching for the #TSMC2021 hashtag or joining the Facebook and LinkedIn groups and keep the conversation going.
